"It is a help to manhood, to culture, to piety, to know one's self akin to those who suffered oppression and made noble sacrifices for the sake of conscience, helped to found our great Western civilization, or rallied to the defence of the infant nation when its life hung in the balance. Not to take a genuine interest in one's forefathers is almost as indefensible as to be vain because they were in some way notable."—Congregationalist.

PREFACE.

To my Kindred, Greeting:

It is fitting that you should know something of the history of the volume that you have so long and patiently awaited, and which you have helped to bring into existence; therefore it is briefly given here.

More than thirty years ago Dr. D. Williams Patterson, an able genealogist, undertook the compilation of the history of our Family. After some eight hundred persons had been connected, an effort was made to publish the work; but few subscriptions being received, the undertaking was abandoned.§ Some fifteen years later I became interested in one of Dr. Patterson's manuscripts that was in the possession of my father (who had assisted in the first attempt), and began to prosecute the work anew. After three lost branches had been connected, correspondence was opened with Dr. Patterson with a view to co-operation with him; he, however, was intent upon immediate publication, which seemed to me undesirable in view of the incomplete condition of the work; so the matter was again dropped, not to be resumed until after the lapse of another period of fifteen years, when his death left me free to push the work to completion. The Family owes a debt of gratitude to Dr. Patterson for his researches, which have proved to be unusually accurate, and of which the present volume is a direct result.

Three sources of information have been drawn upon in preparing the book now in your hands. In the first place, several hundred town, county, and family histories were examined. Secondly, in order to secure all possible information from living members of the Family, about 15,000 forms, circulars, and personal letters were sent to nearly 3,500 individuals. Last, and most important, was the search of original records, including church, land, probate, and town records, and tombstones. About 2,000 large manuscript volumes were examined, mostly by the compiler in person, many of them having no index, and some being almost indecipherable.† These include the records of some sixty towns in western New England and a few in New York. As many of the old towns are not on the lines of the railroads, and in several cases the records were kept in some out-of-the-way farm-house, much time and expense were saved

§It was finally printed, with considerable additions, in "The History and Genealogies of Ancient Windsor." This valuable work by Dr. Henry R. Stiles was published in 1892, and has been of the greatest assistance in the present work. It consists of 1817 pages in two volumes, royal octavo, and includes, besides genealogical studies of the families of all the settlers, a most complete and interesting history of the town itself, giving a minute account of life in the colonial period. It is worth far more than its price ($20.00), and would prove of the greatest value to all of our Family. It can be procured of Miss Ruth T. Sperry, E. Windsor Hill, Conn., who was associated with Dr. Stiles in its production, and is herself a descendant of Matthew Grant, her mother being Harriet F. (Pelton) Sperry, dau. of Sophia (Gaylord) Pelton, dau. of Abiel Gaylord, son of John Gaylord (12100).

by the use of a bicycle. But the steep hills of Connecticut nearly brought the work and the compiler to an end, for it seemed impossible to find a brake sufficiently powerful and reliable to stand the strain, and in the summer of 1897 serious accidents resulted from this cause; but last summer an "Eclipse" bicycle, equipped with its automatic coaster and brake, brought all trouble of this kind to an end, the wheel being under complete control on the steepest hills, with but slight exertion on the part of the rider.

The response from the Family has not been as cordial as was to have been expected. Although many members replied promptly and gave all the help in their power, more responded only after repeated appeals, and then often carelessly and perfunctorily, § while fully one-third of those addressed would not take the trouble to answer at all. These last in many cases held the only known clues to lost members of the Family; and it is probable that, if all had replied promptly and fully, at least 2,000 more of the kin would have found a place in the book, without materially increasing the cost of preparation or publication. The small number of subscribers is also a cause for regret, partly because it prevented the insertion of pictures of all the old homesteads (of which about a score over a century old are known to exist†), and partly because of the undue burden that it placed on the compiler.

While the greatest care has been taken to avoid errors, some slight ones have undoubtedly crept in, owing in part to the illegibility of many of the letters received; but subscribers may rest assured that the lines of descent are accurately given in all cases, as none has been inserted until its authenticity has been proved. Notice of errors or omissions should be sent to the compiler, as it is not improbable that a second volume may some day be published.

It is hoped that the volume will help to promote the object of our Family Association: "To bring into closer union the descendants of Matthew Grant, of Windsor, Conn.; to honor the memory of our ancestors; to cultivate in ourselves the spirit of their unselfish patriotism and sterling integrity; and to collect and preserve the records and traditions of the Family." Let us make the acquaintance of the kinsmen who are our neighbors, join the Association, attend the reunions, and help to make our Family a recognized power for good in the land!

Before laying aside my pen I would extend heartiest thanks to those who have aided in the work. All cannot be named, but a few who have done far more than their share must be: Lucy G. Wheeler (1142,385), Nathaniel G. Grant (1103,6116), Mrs. Lawson Grant (1104,0011), Frank Grant (1120,3072), Mrs. Georgianna Kingsley (1136,5143), Mrs. Rhocean Williams (1143,4003), J. Ray Grant (1143,4410), Mrs. Mary Ellis (1143,6510), Mrs. Chauncey Grant (1550,3421), Thomas P. Grant (1556,4230), Mrs. Mary Shurtleff

§ To this is due the large number of persons whose records are given in Appendix A, who in many instances replied promptly when they were finally located by the compiler.

† A house still standing in Dorchester, Mass., is said to have been built by Matthew Grant, but the compiler has been unable to verify the statement.

(1558,0020), Mrs. Helen French (1103,320,36), Jennie M. Royce (1120,265,10), Mrs. Adah Colt (1136,520,21), Mrs. Isabella Meredith (1142,122,13), Kate G. Bliss (1142,122,60), Henry H. Grant (1554,023,11), Mrs. Maryann Upson (1558,322), and last and most important, my parents, without whose ever willing aid the work could not have been published in so complete a form. A. H. G.

Numbers.

The decimal system of numbering is used because it most readily exhibits the relationships existing between all the members of the family, each person's number containing the numbers of all of his direct ancestors, (see the illustration of this on page 481). The following rules will make this clear:

1. To find a person's parents: Strike off the last figure of his number, and look in the preceding generation on the page indicated in the italic line above his name.

2. To find a person's children: Add a cipher to his number, and look in the following generation, remembering that the numbers in each generation follow each other in regular order, although they are not usually continuous; the clan index on page 564 will be found helpful.

3. To find a number given in Appendix E or Index II: Look for it in the generation indicated by the number of figures in the number; e. g. 1106,4620, having eight figures would be found in the eighth generation, as also would 1106,461A0, as the letters (which are used when there are more than ten children in a family) do not count as figures.

4. To find what relation two persons are to each other: If they are in the same generation and the figures are the same except the last two they are first cousins, if the last three differ they are second cousins, and so on; e. g. $\left. \begin{array}{l} 1106,2210 \\ 1106,4610 \end{array} \right\}$ are third cousins, because they have to go back four generations to reach a common ancestor (1106); if the two persons are in different generations, the relationship must be found through the parent of the one in the younger generation (if they are one generation apart); e. g. 1106,466,10 is first cousin once removed to 1106,4626, because his father is first cousin to 1106,4626.

TO SUBSCRIBERS:

This slip is intended to serve as a book-mark and as a movable key, so that the book need not be opened at two places at the same time when the key is to be consulted.

A very limited edition of this book has been printed, and as the supply on hand diminishes the price will be advanced. The present prices are: Cloth, $6.00; Half Roan, $8.00; Flexible Morocco, $10.00. You will confer a favor upon the members of your family who are not subscribers by acquainting them with this fact.

Extra copies of the illustrations, printed on very heavy paper on one side only, may be had for fifty cents a dozen.

The compiler has given to this work all the time he can afford. As Recorder of the Family Association he will record all facts sent to him; but no questions can be answered unless adequate compensation is enclosed with them. While compiling this book he has acquired a great familiarity with all sources of genealogical information, and is therefore well qualified to pursue researches for ancestry in other lines. His services may be secured for such work on moderate terms.

INTRODUCTION.

"People will not look forward to posterity who never look backward to their ancestors."—Edmund Burke.

We are now a century and a quarter from the movements that resulted in American independence, and more than twice that distance of time from the foundation of the more important colonies. Every decade that passes makes it more difficult to comprehend the conditions that existed in the colonial and revolutionary periods, and widens the gulf of ignorance that separates us from our political as well as personal ancestors. Yet we can not really understand our own times without understanding what has preceded them; and the bridge that will most effectually span this gulf is family history.

But it may be asked, why the importance of this connection with the past, especially here in democratic and progressive America? All the more reason because democratic and progressive. Historians assure us that the instability of the French government is due to the fact that France has no past. The prime effort of the first revolution was to destroy all connection with the past, to burn all the bridges that had sustained them in their march toward civilization—social, political, religious. The revolution was a failure; and its pseudo-reforms fell with it; but it had succeeded in absolutely severing the connection between the France of the nineteenth century and the France of the eighteenth century.

Our revolution (so-called) produced no such historic break; for the separation of England and America, begun in the cabin of the Mayflower, was slowly effected during the next century and a half, and the revolution was only the broad red seal of the document that legalized that separation. Nevertheless, we are in danger of finding ourselves in a condition similar to that of France, but in our case not from revolution but from immigration and emigration. One-third of our population consists of immigrants and the descendants of people who came to this country after 1840; and if we add to that list the negro population, we find that nearly one-half of the people of the United States have little or no organic connection with the founders of this nation and the men and women who participated in its birth struggles, and guarded its infancy.

It has been said that patriotism is proportionate with the ownership of the land by the people. We have now reached a point where the proportion of the people who own land to the whole population is on the decrease. That would be a very serious condition if it were not for the fact that patriotism which is dependent upon the ownership of land is apt to be unintelligent patriotism, and also that it is possible to create a patriotism which is not dependent upon real estate, but is the result of an appreciation of the cost and value of our liberties and institutions. There are two ways in which genealogy may stimulate the growth of such intelligent patriotism.

It will be a real help if we can come to understand more fully the conditions of life in the colonial period, and also the political ideas and necessities that developed the American State. The history of Europe is largely a history of kings and emperors, what might be called the family history of monarchs. But young America had no royal family, and so its history is the history of families,—families uniting to form villages, and villages uniting for common defense, and so growing into states. But back of all the town history and the colony policy lies the family life of John Smith, Peter Brown, and Matthew Grant. Now no one can get at the real history and conditions of the colonies without studying family history; and so no one can study family history without learning of the real inner and creative life of the colonies. The very difficulty of tracing a family across the Atlantic is eloquent of the change that their transplanting wrought in the social condition of the emigrants. Again, the fact that for generations scarcely a marriage took place between the inhabitants of two little New England towns but a few miles apart reveals a part of the reason for the intense jealousy with which local rights were guarded, and which showed itself in the strong anti-national sentiment, as well as in the maintenance of two and even three capitals in some of the states.

The other way in which genealogy develops intelligent patriotism is more direct and personal. Many of us know in a general way that our ancestors lived in this country during the colonial period; and because our knowledge is general and vague it has but little influence upon us. But when we learn that one of our ancestors helped to found a state, that another was fence viewer in a New England town, and that a third participated in the final struggle for political liberty, we shall feel a new and personal interest in the foundation and early development of this country; and this personal interest in the past will grow into a personal interest in the present and future development; we shall be ashamed to have our fences unworthy of the inspection of the old Puritan, we shall feel a new responsibility for the government of the fair cities that our own ancestors founded, and we shall arise to defend anew the liberties for which our fathers fought. It is difficult to see how a man who knows that in his veins flows the blood of men who set at defiance kings, bishops, councils, and royal governors, and seized the rights that were refused them, can meekly bow his neck to wear the collar of any party boss, or sit inactive while the franchises of city and state are being exploited by grasping corporations, whose paid representatives sit in council, assembly, and congress.

From this standpoint the study of genealogy is particularly important for the Western states whose local traditions include nothing of the early history of the nation. While the danger from foreign immigration threatens the East, it is their own emigration that menaces the people of the West, whose family history was left behind in New York or New England. That priceless heritage should be restored to their descendants, so that the West may be indissolubly connected with the organic development of the East.

One of the most dangerous symptoms of our times is that we are beginning to distrust the common people; we think that political, social, and even religious leaders should be men of wealth. It is regarded as the height of absurdity to send to the national legislature a farmer or a mechanic, and almost as ridiculous to send such a one to the legislature in many of our states. The study of genealogy would convince most of us that our ancestors were quite every-day sort of people, who were more familiar with blacksmithing than with Blackstone, and who knew more about raising stock than manipulating stocks. Yet those same men worked out a political system that was the wonder, and is still the admiration of the world.

Family history also exerts a very subtle but powerful influence upon personal morality. A man who thinks of his ancestors will think also of his descendants. He will not want to place the first blot upon a clean and honorable family record. He will avoid actions that would bring upon him social or business dishonor, and will strive to hand down untarnished to children who are worthy to bear it the name that in the past has been synonymous with unselfish patriotism and personal integrity.

It will be a surprise to many to learn that nothing is known of the origin of our Family. Although numerous writers have stated positively that we are descended from the Scotch Clan of Grant, no proof has ever been forthcoming. It is true that in several branches of the Family there are traditions of Scotch descent, but they are vague and contradictory, while in at least one branch there is a particularly clear tradition of English origin. None of these traditions can be traced to a period earlier than the Revolution, and it is probable that the prevalence of our name among the Scotch soldiers who came over at that time is responsible for their origin. Few if any Scots emigrated to New England as early as 1630, and they would have been marked men. On the other hand it is known that Matthew Grant sailed from England in a ship that bore a Puritan church gathered in the extreme south of England, that he was, or soon became, a member of this church, and was one of its most prominent members after the removal to Windsor. None of his children or grandchildren bore typical Scotch names, and the only one in the fifth generation can doubtless be traced to the presence of Alexander Allyn (see 152) in Windsor. Instead they bore the names then common among English Puritans, and which are still borne by a Grant family residing in the south of England. The Family Association might well take up the investigation of this problem, some clue to which may possibly be found in Matthew Grant's diary, long hidden among the papers of the late J. Hammond Trumbull, of Hartford.

The only known use of arms was by Samuel Grant (1103) in 1739 in witnessing a will. Beside his signature is a seal on which is impressed the following coat of arms : On a chevron between three fleur-de-lis, five ermine spots. These are not the arms of any Grant family given by Burke; but it is significant that they should have been used by the representative of the senior male line, to whom any seal ring belonging to Matthew Grant would have been most likely to descend.

Whatever may have been the history of our Family in Europe, its record in America has been, with well-nigh unbroken uniformity, one in which we may take an honest pride. From his position as surveyor in Dorchester and Windsor, and from his own writings, it is evident that Matthew Grant had a good education. That he appreciated it is proved by the fact that among his descendants only two adults have been found who could not write, although this was an accomplishment often thought unnecessary for women in the colonial period. Certain other traits are found generally throughout the Family, among which may be noted absolute honesty in word and deed, unflinching tenacity of purpose, and a tendency to reticence and unobtrusiveness. This last trait is partly responsible for the small number of town offices held by members of the Family during certain periods, although their residence at a distance from town centers also had an influence, as is evidenced by the fact that when E. Windsor was set off from Windsor in 1768, the Family at once assumed a prominent part in the affairs of the new town. The Family has been characterized by a devoted loyalty to American institutions, not a royalist being found among them, and many who did not fight in the Revolution rendered services of equal value at home; and while they fought against each other in the Civil War, it should not be forgotten that those on the side of the South were fighting for one of the oldest of American principles, state rights, which they did not believe to have been surrendered when the nation was born. There have of course been black sheep among us, although the compiler has not felt it necessary to uncloset the few skeletons that we have; but Dr. Patterson, whose opinion was based upon a wide knowledge of the history of New England families, said that ours was the cleanest he knew, and a corroboration of this is found in the fact that only seven illegitimate births§ have come to the knowledge of the compiler.

There is, however, a marked difference in the characteristics of the various clans, as is shown by the tables in Appendix D†. This is especially noticeable in the matter of general education, one clan in particular being on the verge of illiteracy, while another (Z) is noted for its long continued interest in educational matters. Three clans suffered to an unusual degree from consumption and one from intemperance, but both these tendencies appear to have been largely overcome. Considered geographically, clans A, C, and Z are the most widely dispersed, while L and Q are the most concentrated, the former in southern New York and the latter in two small districts in Connecticut and Ohio; it is quite probable that these two clans would be benefited by migration, as too close a nesting of families tends ultimately to impair vitality and check development. Clan B resides in the South; it has been noted throughout its history for its military achievements, and was at one time the wealthiest clan, but suffered severely through the Civil War. K is today unquestionably the wealthiest of the larger clans. A, K, L, and Q are noted for raising large families, while D and E have narrowly escaped extinction, and within a few years the name will have disappeared in clan H. Clan T abandoned agriculture a century ago, apparently forever. In N. Stonington and S. Windsor the land acquired two centuries ago is still largely owned in the family, while in Windsor, Tolland, and Litchfield it has all passed to other hands. For two hundred years the great majority of the members of the Family were Congregationalists, all of the earliest churches in western New England being of that denomination; but now that body probably ranks fifth in the number of adherents in our Family, being preceded by the Methodist, Baptist, Episcopalian, and Presbyterian churches, probably in the order given; most of the members of clans L and Y are Methodists, while Baptists are most numerous in clan K.

§ They have not been recorded in this volume.

† In Appendix D it should have been stated that Table II refers exclusively to adults, except where subscriptions were made in the names of minors.

At the close of the Revolution, a century and a half after the settlement of Windsor, the Family was confined within an area 175 miles long by 85 miles wide (see page 485). Since that time we have grown up with the country, or, more literally, forced the country to grow up with us, for we have been pioneers in almost every section. The Revolution was a powerful stimulus to migration (see page 486); another wave succeeded the War of 1812; the Mexican War had a similar result, enhanced by the facilities offered by railroads; and the influence of the Civil War in this particular is not yet exhausted. For the present distribution of the Family see Appendix E.

Families, like empires, rise to importance and then decline. Many American families have become almost extinct or have passed the zenith of their influence; but the stock of the old colony founder, Matthew Grant, is apparently as vigorous as ever and as capable of great achievements in the future as in the past.

Numbers.

The decimal system of numbering is used because it most readily exhibits the relationships existing between all the members of the family, each person's number containing the numbers of all of his direct ancestors, (see the illustration of this on page 481). The following rules will make this clear:

1. To find a person's parents: Strike off the last figure of his number, and look in the preceding generation on the page indicated in the italic line above his name.

2. To find a person's children: Add a cipher to his number, and look in the following generation, remembering that the numbers in each generation follow each other in regular order, although they are not usually continuous; the clan index on page 564 will be found helpful.

3. To find a number given in Appendix E or Index II: Look for it in the generation indicated by the number of figures in the number; e. g. 1106,4620, having eight figures would be found in the eighth generation, as also would 1106,461A0, as the letters (which are used when there are more than ten children in a family) do not count as figures.

4. To find what relation two persons are to each other: If they are in the same generation and the figures are the same except the last two they are first cousins, if the last three differ they are second cousins, and so on; e. g. $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} 1106,2210 \\ 1106,4610 \end{array} \right\}$ are third cousins, because they have to go back four generations to reach a common ancestor (1106); if the two persons are in different generations, the relationship must be found through the parent of the one in the younger generation (if they are one generation apart); e. g. 1106,466,10 is first cousin once removed to 1106,4626, because his father is first cousin to 1106,4626.

Clans.

The clan system was adopted for convenience of reference. Each clan consists of the descendants of one of the great-grandsons of Matthew Grant (1) in the male line whose own male line has been perpetuated to the present day. The number of every member of a clan has for its first four figures the number of the head of the clan (e. g. 1103); this enables the reader to recognize the clans in the fifth and sixth generations where clan headings are not given, on account of the presence of many who do not belong to clans (e. g. 11690). It is not improbable that new clans may be discovered (e. g. 1553). The system of numbering provides for the insertion of new clans or individuals, without changing numbers already assigned.

Notes.

Where authorities differ on names and dates the less probable is put in parenthesis.

The residence given is always that of the member of the Family, unless otherwise indicated.

The occupation, offices, church membership, and military service given is always that of the husband unless otherwise indicated.

Names of places are not repeated in the record of an individual, but are indicated by their initial letters, unless two places the names of which begin with the same letter are mentioned, in which case the name is repeated in full, but without repeating the state. In all other cases where the state is not mentioned, Connecticut is meant.

The name "Windsor" is often used when the present town of that name is not meant, the old town having been divided at different times (see Appendix B). It is frequently impossible to determine which part of the old town is meant, but it may be stated that the habitat of the Family in Windsor after the death of Matthew Grant (1) was chiefly the present towns of S. Windsor and Ellington. A similar confusion exists in the case of Stonington and N. Stonington, the latter being the principal habitat of clans K and L. Confusion also exists in the modern records, because members of the Family frequently give the name of the town in which they were born, etc., instead of the name of the village.

Prior to 1752 the year began at Mch. 25, and dates between Jan. 1 and Mch. 25 were written thus: 1697/8, that date corresponding to 1698 by the present system of reckoning.

Female lines are carried out only one generation until the sixth generation is reached, after which they are given as fully as male lines.

Membership in churches, orders, etc., is not given in the case of persons now living.

Persons born prior to 1810 may be assumed to have died, unless otherwise indicated; those born since that date are assumed to be living unless their death is noted.

Living persons may be assumed to be unmarried unless their marriage is noted.

THE GRANT FAMILY.

FIRST GENERATION.

Matthew Grant (1) b. Oct. 27, 1601; d. Windsor, Dec. 16, 1681; m. (1) Nov. 16, 1625, Priscilla ——— [d. W., Apr. 27, 1644, æ 43 yrs. 2 mos.]; m. (2) W., May 29, 1645, Susanna (Capen or Chapin) Rockwell [b. Apr. 5, 1602; d. W., Nov. 14, 1666; wid. of Dea. Wm. Rockwell; prob. dau. of Bernard Capen]. On Mch. 20, 1630, he embarked with his family on the "Mary and John" at Plymouth, Eng., and reached Boston harbor May 30, 1630. He settled at Dorchester, Mass., and was admitted a freeman May 18, 1631; but, with many others, he disliked the close union of church and state that characterized the colony of Massachusetts Bay, as well as the growing tendency to establish the government in the hands of a privileged class and to minimize the voice of the people in the conduct of their own affairs. Accordingly, in Oct. 1635, he went overland to the Connecticut River, with the party that prepared for the settlement of Windsor, although his family probably did not remove to Windsor until the following April. There, freed from the trammels of a royal charter, he assisted in forming a true democracy, the germ from which American political institutions have grown. His lot was in the Palisado, next the town lot. This he gave to his son John, with whom he spent his declining years. It is said that he was a carpenter. He was the first, and for many years the principal, surveyor; deacon of the first church; recorder (town clerk) 1652-77; townsman (selectman) many years, frequently receiving the highest number of votes; on the committees to lay out the bounds between Windsor and Hartford in 1651 and 1660, and to view the state of the town in 1651 and 1654. The absence of records makes it impossible to give a complete list of the offices he held, but he was one of the important men of the town. Of him Dr. Stiles says, in his History of Ancient Windsor: "Few men, indeed, filled so large a place in the early history of Windsor, or filled it so well, as honest Matthew Grant; his name figures in almost every place of trust, and the early records of the town show that his duties were always conscientiously performed." In 1654 he compiled "A Book of Records of Town Ways in Windsor." He was also the compiler of the "Old Church Record," which has furnished the basis for the histories of most of the families of ancient Windsor. He was a type of the best settlers of New England, and left to his descendants an untarnished name and the example of an unswerving fidelity to the public trusts committed to him, for he quaintly comments on his own work: "I have been careful to do nothing on one man's desire."+ and Mercy Warriner; m. (1) Jan. 1, 1801, Susan Upham, dau. of Capt. Phineas Upham, of B.; m. (2) Mary Brown, dau. of Moses Brown, of Newburyport; lawyer and merchant; grad. Dartmouth Coll. 1797; senator of Mass.; trustee of Amherst Coll.; visitor of Andover Theol. Sem.; her life was written by Miss Guilford under the title, "The Use of a Life."

She was one of the most influential of the pioneers in the higher education of women. Having received under Rev. Joseph Emerson, of Saugus, Mass., the necessary training, and supplemented it by several years experience in teaching, she opened the Adams' Female Academy in Derry, N. H., in 1824. The school became one of the very highest order for that period, providing a three years course of study, additional to the training of the common school, and giving a written testimonial, in other words diploma, to those completing it. A marked feature of this course was the systematic study of the Bible; and the development of Christian character, in every pupil, was earnestly sought. In 1827 she established the Ipswich (Mass.) Female Seminary, a large number of her pupils following her. As early as 1834 she began to agitate the subject of a permanent building for a school for women, with accommodations and facilities similar to colleges for young men. Much interest was awakened; but her health failing, she was obliged to leave the seminary in charge of Miss Lyon, the assistant principal, whose privilege it was, with an experienced corps of teachers from Ipswich, to carry out, by the opening of Mt. Holyoke Seminary in 1837, Miss Grant's ideal of a permanent institution for women. In 1839 she finally gave up the charge of Ipswich Seminary. During her fifteen years in Derry and Ipswich, sixteen hundred young women had come under her care, one hundred and fifty-six of whom graduated. Her interest in religious and educational work never waned; and she was a frequent visitor to institutions in charge of friends and former pupils, imparting her large experience, and giving freely of her time and means to various objects which seemed to her worthy of aid.

Campbell, "Memoir of Mrs. Judith S. Grant."

In 1835 he left Utica, where he was known as "the friend of the poor," and went to Ooroomiah, Persia, as the first medical missionary to that country. He early secured a most desirable location for the mission, and his professional services were in incessant request by all classes, whose gratitude was so marked that even proud Muselman chiefs stooped to kiss the hem of his garments. His success was due not merely to his medical skill, but largely to his unwavering devotion and to the tact that marked his labors. He identified himself with the people by adopting their garb, and, as his complexion was very dark and his hair and beard black, he looked a very Oriental. He also won the local physicians by giving them instruction and medicines. His wife was admirably adapted to be his helper, and the school for girls that she started is still flourishing. He was tall and powerfully built and a stranger to fear, a characteristic that won the respect of the barbarous Koords. In 1839 he made a journey through the mountains of Koordistan, from which no European had ever returned alive. While on this journey, which lasted eight months, he was called at midnight to the castle of a chief who was quite ill; although a failure to cure would have made his own life forfeit, Dr. Grant answered the summons unhesitatingly, and won a powerful friend. On another occasion his party was attacked by a band of robbers; he was unarmed, but rose in his stirrups and struck the leader full in the face with his riding whip, the combined surprise and pain causing the latter to wheel and ride off with his followers. In 1841 he established at Mosul a separate mission for the Mountain Nestorians, and, although death soon ended his labors there, his name is still revered in that region. +

C. and became a partner in the banking firm of Grant and Ward; pres. of Mexican Southern R. R.; author of "Personal Memoirs of U. S. Grant." To record adequately his life and deeds would be to write the history of this nation for a score of years, a labor that is beyond the capacity of this work. For an insight into the man himself, his own memoirs should be read, in which he stands revealed in heroic simplicity of character. The honors that were conferred upon him, such as has been the lot of no other to receive, were worn without ostentation or arrogance, nor did they make him forgetful of the merits and services of others. And we may recall with satisfaction that the quiet tenacity of purpose, which was the keystone of his military success, is the trait that has been dominant in the family as far back as we can trace its history. +

APPENDIX B.

Illustrations.

Page 484. The arrow tips show the direction of migrations; the dates of the earliest known migrations between the places indicated are given when known; rivers are indicated to show that early migrations invariably followed watercourses; this is almost equally true of the migrations shown on Page 485, although not indicated; in this map and the next, descendants in female lines have not been traced.

Page 485. The places indicated by the numbers are: 1, New London Co.; 2, Tolland Co.; 3, Hartford Co.; 4, Litchfield Co.; 5, Berkshire Co.; 6, Westfield; 7, Boston; 8, Halifax; 9, Norwich; 10, Lyme; 11, Rutland Co.; 12, Orwell; 13, Chittenden Co.; 14, Montreal; 15, West Indies (not shown on map); 16, Huntington; 17, N. Page 486. Town lines are indicated by short dashes and rivers, county lines by criss-cross. Several towns in the southern part of the state are shown only in part, and the following towns are omitted: Branford, Orange, and Milford, (in New Haven Co.); Stratford, Trumbull, Bridgeport, Fairfield, Easton, Weston, Westport, Wilton, Norwalk, New Canaan, Darien, Stamford, and Greenwich, (in Fairfield Co.).

Many of the ancient towns have been much reduced in size by the organization of new towns, but only a few of the changes need be noted; the ancient town is given first, then the towns taken from it, with the date of their organization: Windsor—E. Windsor (1768), Bloomfield (form. Wintonbury) (1835), Windsor Locks (including part of E. Granby) (1854); E. Windsor—Ellington (1786), S. Windsor (1845); Litchfield—part of Washington (1779), Morris (form. S. Farms) (1859); Stonington—N. Stonington (1807); Bolton—Vernon

The names of the villages mentioned in this book are usually the same as the names of the towns in which they are situated; exceptions are as follows: Amity (Woodbridge), Broad Brook (E. Windsor), Deepriver (Saybrook), E. Windsor Hill (S. Windsor), Ekonk (Sterling), Gilead (Hebron), Grant's Hill (Tolland), Grantville (Norfolk), Hanover (Sprague), Hazardville (Enfield), Hockanum (E. Hartford), Ivoryton (Essex), Jewett City (Griswold), Joshua-town (Lyme), Long Hill (Trumbull), Mechanicsville (Thompson), Melrose (E. Windsor), Millbrook (Colebrook), Milldale (Southington), Moosup (Plainfield), Mt. Hope (Mansfield), Mystic (Stonington), Northfield (Litchfield), Oneco (Sterling), Parkville (Hartford), Pawcatuck (Stonington), Pendleton Hill (N. Stonington), Poque-tanuck (Preston), Quarryville (Bolton), Riverton (Barkhamsted), Rockville (Vernon), Rowayton (Norwalk), Shewville (Ledyard), Silver Lane (E. Hartford), Talcottville (Vernon), Thompsonville (Enfield), Vintons Mills and Wapping (S. Windsor), Warehouse Pt. (E. Windsor), Waterville (Waterbury), Willimantic (Windham), Windsorville (E. Windsor), Winsted (Winchester).

Page 487. This house was purchased in 1794 by Miner Grant (1142,12), and has remained in his family ever since, the present owner being Miner Grant (1142,1245), who, with his wife, appears in the picture.

Page 488. This was the homestead of Ambrose Grant (15540), and was destroyed by fire about 1894, shortly after passing out of the family.

Page 489. The rear part of this house was the home of Clan D for 120 years; the front part was built by David W. Grant in 1832; it passed out of the family in 1870.

Page 490. This is the oldest Grant homestead, the rear part having been built by Samuel Grant (11) in 1697, and the front part by Ebenezer Grant (1109) in 1757; it has always remained in the direct line, its present owner being Roswell Grant (1109,373); in it are the silver tankard, tall clock, compass and chain of its first owner.

	Rhoda (Andrews) Grant (15584)
Ruluf Grant (1558,401)	Raphael Grant (1558,402)
	Harvey F. Grant (1558,403)

APPENDIX D.

Statistics.

Table I exhibits the family arranged by clans and generations; it also gives the number, by clans, of those who are known to have attended college and served in war, and the average age at marriage and death; it includes only those given in full-face type, and not those mentioned in notes, etc., who would swell the total to about 8000.

Table II deals especially with the living members of the family; it shows the interest they have taken in this work, their principal occupations at the present time, and their stability.

The following notes are explanatory of the tables:

(a) This column gives the average age at death of members of the family who have died since 1869; the first number in the column is the average age of the members of the first four generations, given for comparison, and not included in the general average at the foot of the column; clan D had but one death in the period.

(b) The same periods were considered as in the preceding note; first marriages only considered.

(c) In this line are given the members of the family who are not placed in clans, except in the last three columns as explained in the preceding notes.

(d) Living adults whose addresses are known.

(e) Percentage of interest shown is computed by comparing the three preceding columns.

(f) Both employers and operatives are included.

(g) Principally real estate and insurance agents.

(h) Bookkeepers, stenographers, typewriters, etc., but not clerks in stores and banks, they being placed in the mercantile and banking columns.

(j) Architects and civil, chemical, electrical, and mechanical engineers.

(k) Authors and journalists.

(m) In the first of these columns is given the percentage of living members of the family who reside in their native states; in the other column is given the percentage of adults dying since 1869 who died in their native states; it will be noticed that several of the clans are undergoing a marked change in this particular, and that in general the family is settling down after the unrest caused by the Civil War.
